H.F. Broadbent, 58 Years With Hardware Firm

Henry F. Broadbent, former Washington hardware retailer, died today after a heart attack at his home, 1427 Hemlock street N.W.

He was born in Stoneboro, Pa., and attended Bloomburg State Teachers College, Bloomburg, Pa., before coming to Washington in 1898.

Upon arriving here he joined his uncle, James B. Lambie, in his hardware business at Fourteenth street and New York avenue N.W. He remained in business at that address for 58 years and was president of the firm at the time of his retirement in 1956.

He was an active member of the Washington Commandery of the Knights Templar, the Masons, the Almas Temple of the Shrine and the Western Presbyterian Church at Nineteenth and H streets N.W.

His wife, Sarah E. Harrison, died in 1952. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Francis Doherty of Olney, Md.; a son, Henry F. Broadbent, jr., of the home address, and a brother, William J. Broadbent of Alexandria.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at Deal's Funeral Home, 4812 Georgia avenue N.W. Burial will be at Congressional Cemetery.
