Chauffeur, Maid Found Asphyxiated in Garage

The bodies of two persons who apparently died of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning were found yesterday morning in the garage of the office of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico at 2210 R St., nw., according to police.

The dead were identified as Nora Flores, 24, a domestic who lived at 5028 Lowell St., nw., and Reginaldo Arevalo, 34, a chauffeur for the Commonwealth office.

Police said the bodies were found in a car by a janitor. Homicide squad detectives said the engine of the automobile had been kept running and a half-closed garage door had trapped carbon monoxide inside the car.
