

Charles B. Haggemaker (- 29 Sep 1913)

The Evening Star, September 30, 1913

Lifeless Body Found In Bed

Charles B. Haggemaker Commits Suicide by Inhaling Gas

Charles B. Haggemaker, forty-five years old, was found dead in bed in a rooming house at 343 Pennsylvania avenue northwest yesterday afternoon. Two open gas jets explained his death.

Henry Flagler, a roomer in the house, who detected the odor of gas and made an examination of the premises to locate the leak, went to the room Haggemaker occupied and discovered the body. Dr. Murphy responded to a call sent to Casualty Hospital and pronounced Haggemaker dead. The body was taken to the morgue.

Charles Haggemaker, son of the deceased, residing at 1213 11th street southeast, was notified of his father's death. About a week ago Haggemaker rented the room in the Pennsylvania avenue house. It is stated that he appeared despondent and the police think his deed was prompted by domestic troubles.