Funeral of John E. Hodgson

The funeral of John E. Hodgson took place this afternoon from his late residence, 2417 Pennsylvania avenue. Many beautiful floral tokens evidenced the high regard in which the deceased was held. The interment was in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Hodgson was a member of one of the oldest families of this city, six generations having resided in the District of Columbia. He was a much esteemed and useful citizen. For twenty ears he was in charge of the mechanical department of the establishment of B.F. Guy & Co. At the time of his death he was an employee in the Washington navy yard. He was financial secretary of Seneca Tribe of Red Men and held a similar position in the Order of Mechanics, and both organizations were represented at the funeral.

Mr. Hodgson was a devoted husband and father, always holding the highest duty of a parent was to train his children to be useful citizens. The eldest son, John, is superintendent of the Columbia Sand Company, another son, Capt. Jos. F. Hodgson of the National Guard, is bookkeeper for Heiburger & Co. The youngest son is a student in the Manual Training School, and Lydia, a daughter, is a teacher in the public schools.
