

John Pechin Ingle

(3 Dec 1791 – 2 Feb 1863)

The National Intelligencer, June 7, 1842

Ran against W. Seaton and E. Hanly for Mayor. Seaton won.

The Evening Star, February 2, 1863

Another Old Citizen Gone

John P. Ingle, Esq., one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Washington, died this morning early, aged 71 years. Mr. Ingle's death was sudden. On Saturday morning, when he got up, he felt well as usual, and after eating a hearty breakfast went to attend to his business at the office of the Franklin Insurance Company, of which he was president. He was there taken suddenly ill of inflammation of the bowels, and was taken home, and died as above stated. Mr. Ingle has, during his long life, held many prominent and responsible positions, as president of the Patriotic Bank, cashier of the Bank of Washington, etc., etc. Mr. Ingle has held various municipal offices with much credit.

The Evening Star, February 4, 1863

John P. Ingle, Esq.

The Managers of the Bible Society in this city held a meeting at the rooms of the Depository yesterday, in order to take some action in relation to the death of Mr. Ingle, who was at the time of his death President of the Washington City Bible Society. Resolutions of respect to the memory of deceased were unanimously adopted, and as a further mark of respect the Managers attended the funeral in a body.