Major S.B. Milton Dies Suddenly

Overcome by Paralytic Stroke at Chesapeake Bay Summer Home

Maj. Samuel Burleigh Milton of the editorial staff of The Evening Star, died suddenly yesterday afternoon of a paralytic stroke at his summer home on the Chesapeake Bay in Calvert County, Md. He was 66 years old.

Although Maj Milton had been in poor health for some time, his death was unexpected. He left his office in The Star Monday evening and went to his home on the bay.

His wife, Mrs. Inez Seymour Milton was alone with him when he was stricken. She immediately communicated with Maj. Milton's stepson, Seymour McConnell. The stepson, with Dr. Millard Thompson, the family physician and an old friend drove to the home, arriving about an hour before his death at 2 o'clock.

Body Brought to Washington

The body has been brought to Washington and is resting at the funeral parlors of J. William Lee's Sons, 332 Pennsylvania avenue. Funeral arrangements were being made today.

He is survived by his wife, Mr. McConnell and one nephew, Ormund Milton of New York City. Maj. Milton had a long and varied career in newspaper work.

After attending public and private schools in this city he entered the service of The Star in 1876, serving in the mechanical, business and news departments.

In 1883 he went to the Dakota Territory and entered the publishing business, establishing the Redfield Observer in Redfield, S. Dak., in 1888, the year South Dakota was admitted to statehood. He later purchased the Redfield Journal and merged the two papers. He published the merged paper until 1905, when he moved to Mason City, Iowa, and established the Mason City Star. Later he moved to Minneapolis and became associated with the Minneapolis Journal and the Northwest Farmer.

Maj. Milton took an active part in the civic and military life of South Dakota, serving as an active member on the Republican State Central Committee. He also helped organize the territorial and State militia and served with the rank of colonel on the staffs of the first two Governors of the State.

Was Representative's Secretary

He was private secretary for Representative Gifford during South Dakota's territorial period and served in a like capacity with Representative Lucas after the territory had been admitted to Statehood. Later he returned to The Star. Maj. Milton also was a member of the Inaugural Committee for President Harrison, Roosevelt and McKinley.

He took an active part in the work of the South Dakota State Guards and was later appointed to the Organized Reserve Corps, U.S.A., with the rank of major.

A member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Maj. Milton was one of a small group of men who financed and built the first Episcopal Church in Redfield.

Maj. Milton was born in Washington on June 30, 1864 a son of George Lafayette and Ophelia S. (Baggett) Milton.

Prominent in Club Work

On October 4, 1892, he was married to Pearl Irma Eldredge. Following the death of his first wife he married Mrs. Inez Seymour McConnell on June 5, 1909.

He was a member of the International Society of Arts and Letters, the Maryland State Society, the South Dakota Society, Scottish Rite (32d degree), Knight Templars, Eastern Star Elks, the Southern Society and the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association. He was active some years ago in amateur theatrical and Shakespearian circles.

Maj. Milton lived here at 3545 Sixteenth Street.
