Kate C. Moore, English Teacher For 40 Years

Miss Kate C. Moore, 80, an English teacher at Eastern High School for almost 40 years, died Thursday at her home after a long illness.

Miss Moore, who lived at 2940 Upton St. NW, taught thousands of District youngsters during her long career, many of whom have become prominent public figures.

A native Washingtonian, she was a graduate of old Central High School and of George Washington University. She joined the faculty at Eastern High School in 1910 and taught English there until her retirement in 1952.

For many years, Miss Moore was unofficial dean of the faculty at Eastern in charge of graduating classes.

She leaves one sister, Mrs. Mary M. Baldwin, of South Orange, N.J.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Miss Moore's home, 2940 Upton St. NW.
