

George P. Noble

(- 9 Jun 1854)

The Evening Star, June 10, 1854

Accident.

A man of the name of George Noble, a rigger at the Navy Yard, fell from the top of the stack of the ordnance building yesterday afternoon, and was so dreadfully injured that it was thought he could not survive.

The Evening Star, June 13, 1854

The Accident at the Navy Yard

The rigger at the Navy Yard who met with the accident last week, mentioned at the time in the Star has since died of the effects of the injuries received and was buried the other day. There was quite a large attendance at his funeral.