Oh, how sudden was the summons,
When the word came he was dead;
Time was too short to say farewell
To the one we loved so dear.
 Son and Brother

We shall find our treasurers, one by one,
Lost links from love's broken chain,
And the tender touch of the pierced hand
Will reclasp them once again.

Fold him, Father, in Thine arms,
And let him henceforth be
A messenger of love between
Our human hearts and Thee.
