Widow Dies As Her Husband Had Foretold

Premonition of C.A.J. Williamson, Who Passed Away July 16, Proves to Be True

A premonition that his wife would not live more than thirty days after his death caused C.A.J. Williamson, ninety-two years old, 1311 E street southeast who died July 16, to request that his body remain in a vault at Congressional cemetery for one month. If after that time his wife did not die, he was to be interred.

On Saturday Mrs. Agnes J. Williamson, widow of Mr. Williamson, died at her home, her death coming within two days of the allotted month. As a result a double funeral was held this afternoon at Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Williamson was for sixty-two years superintendent of carpenters at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Mrs. Williamson, who was eighty-three years old, was actively identified with Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. L.F. Mothersead, and two sons by a former marriage, George C. Pumphrey and James P. Pumphrey.
