

John Winnans

(- 24 May 1861)

The Evening Star, May 25, 1861

Death of Young Winans

Yesterday evening, young Winans, who was accidentally shot at Mrs. Stout's boarding-house on Thursday night, died from the effects of the wound. He was much loved by the members of the troupe now performing at the Theater here, of which he was a member, and his death has cast a gloom over the whole party.