

The Evening Star, August 18, 1873, p. 4
Reinterment Of The Victims Of The Wawaset

On Saturday night the tugboat Mary Lewis came up about 9 o'clock, bringing the body of a colored woman named Jane Manning. All the working force of Mr. Burgdorf also came up, but went down again this morning to complete the work of reburial. It was expected that this would have been accomplished on Saturday last, but owing to the heavy rain the work progressed much more slowly than it would otherwise have done. There were about eight more bodies to remove when the tug left on Saturday last.